THE SECRET IS OUT!

When Alphasense moved into their custom-built factory back in 2007, it was with high expectations of success. Despite a global recession and gloomy economic predictions, Alphasense has exceeded all targets and is looking to the future with optimism.

And the secret of their success?

Sales & Marketing Director, Arthur Burnley, says, "There isn't one! Our focus all along has been our customers' needs: from the very beginning, Alphasense has been determined to offer the superior products and service customers are entitled to expect. We believe our success is simply a result of our customers' response to that mission".

With a new phase of expansion already underway, manufacturing capacity in Alphasense is set to increase dramatically over the next 12 months. To support this increase, new employment opportunities will be created in all departments - production, technical support and sales.

CEO, Andrea Gotley says, "As always, it really is all about our customers. This latest investment is the best way to respond to their need for higher volumes and faster delivery while maintaining the quality and reliability they have come to expect from Alphasense. I guess it's also our way of saying 'thank you' for making Alphasense the success it is today".
